Matt Bradley
Information Design Major, May 2010
Sage College of Albany

Matt Bradley is an Information Design major at the Sage College of Albany in Upstate New York. He is finishing his last semester with an internship at the Lark Street Business Improvement District (BID), a not-for-profit organization that works to improve and promote the Lark Street neighborhood in downtown Albany through various programs and services. As an intern, Matt contributes his creativity to the Special Events and Promotions Program by designing flyers, posters, brochures, and invitations for upcoming events.

Since 2008, Matt has also been a Gallery Assistant at the Opalka Gallery on the Sage College of Albany campus. He assists the gallery director with the

EXPERIENCE

Matt has had several on-campus leadership roles such as Student Mentor and Resident Assistant. As a Student Mentor, Matt helped first-year students with their transition to Sage and college life. He had an active role in organizing Orientation Weekend for the fall 2008 semester. As a Resident Assistant, Matt had similar duties. With his strong interpersonal skills, he oversaw students living in the residence hall and helped mediate any issues that arose.

Matt is an effective leader who holds talents in many different areas, such as art, photography, typography, digital production, and graphic design. His studies and experience in these areas provide him with skills and knowledge to pursue a career in any creative field.

Panel Discussion with Award-Winning Independent Documentary Filmmakers

Next Thursday, April 22, at 6 PM, Russell Sage College presents a panel discussion with award-winning independent documentary filmmakers!

Tom Mercer, writer and director of Uncivil Liberties, has a masters degree from Rockefeller College in Public Affairs and studied film at Ithaca College. Mercer co-founded and led a regional chapter of the Association of Independent Video and Filmmakers (AIVF). Uncivil Liberties is a documentary set in the near future and shows a United States where the government resorts to heightened surveillance of its own citizens in the name of security, while domestic extremists boldly rebel and take up arms in resistance.

Justin Maine, a director of the documentary So Right So Smart, graduated from Sage Junior College of Albany with a degree in Graphic Design. He pursued his passion of writing, producing and directing independent films. Maine co-founded MagicWig Productions, Inc. in 2002 with Guy Noerr and Don Fisher. So Right So Smart is an award-winning film narrated by Daryl Hannah and is about the movement

Julie Casper Roth, director of The Main, graduated from Smith College and is an award-winning filmmaker whose work has been presented at such venues as MadCat International Women's Film Festival, Athens International Film and Video Festival, and Chicago Reeling Lesbian and Gay International Film Festival. The Main is a film about the first openly gay bar that opened up in 1983 in Superior, Wisconsin. The film also explores social trends that may threaten the continued existence of historically significant queer spaces.

Julia Guther.

I was on Twitter earlier today and Grain Edit, a graphic design inspiration blog, tweeted a piece they did about Julia Guther, a Germany-based illustrator and graphic designer. They mentioned that she does great typography, so I had to check out her site and was deeply impressed with her portfolio.

Artwork for "Butcher the Bar", an England-based band

Julia has worked with many magazines on layouts, and that is what I hope to gain experience in. I was also intrigued by her "links" page. She included links to people that she has done work for, people she admires, and stuff she likes. Once I build a client base, I will be able to include references on my site, too.

Sage College of Albany's Opalka Gallery has a new exhibition! Visual artist, Randy Garber, has her work displayed at the gallery until April 18th.

As a Gallery Assistant, I was able to see Randy's work up close and it is definitely beautiful. The images I am sharing are from her newest collection. It is a 3-part installation called "Listening." Here is a closer view of the art on the copper bars.

The Gates.

I'm sure plenty of us remember this piece of work in Central Park in 2005. When I saw these photos, I didn't think much of it. I thought it was interesting and added an extra value to an already beautiful park. I tells the story of Christo and Jean-Claude (Christo's wife), the artists behind the work. I didn't realize there was so much controversy in putting up these pieces. Many people against Christo believed that he would be vandalizing an already beautiful piece of art, Central Park. It was an interesting take on how people view art. The comments people made about it ruining the nature of the park were a little outlandish. I suggest you take a look!

lomogra-riffic & letterpresses.

Lomography sells notebooks! I wasn't aware of that until I saw a tweet they posted on their Twitter account. Like coffee mugs, I'm really like journals. I like to have all of my sketches, ideas, thoughts, and crazy imaginations in one place. They're always a lot of fun to look back at.

Typography Resources/Inspirations

I have also been on a typography rampage. It is my final semester at Sage College of Albany & I have barely discovered their library. I didn't realize they had many books on type and graphic design. I kind of regret not utilizing my privileges sooner! But, anyway, I stumbled upon this blog called We Made This. They're a graphic design studio in London. They have some really neat posts on different designs and typography and letterpresses.

Helvetica Font-Bot

While I was stumbling on StumbleUpon, I came across this site that had a series of Font-Bots. I thought they were pretty neat, especially after watching the Helvetica documentary (I suggest everyone to watch it).

What's even cooler is that you can buy Font-Bot posters, T-shirts, and skins for your laptop or iPhone!

Get a Design Job!

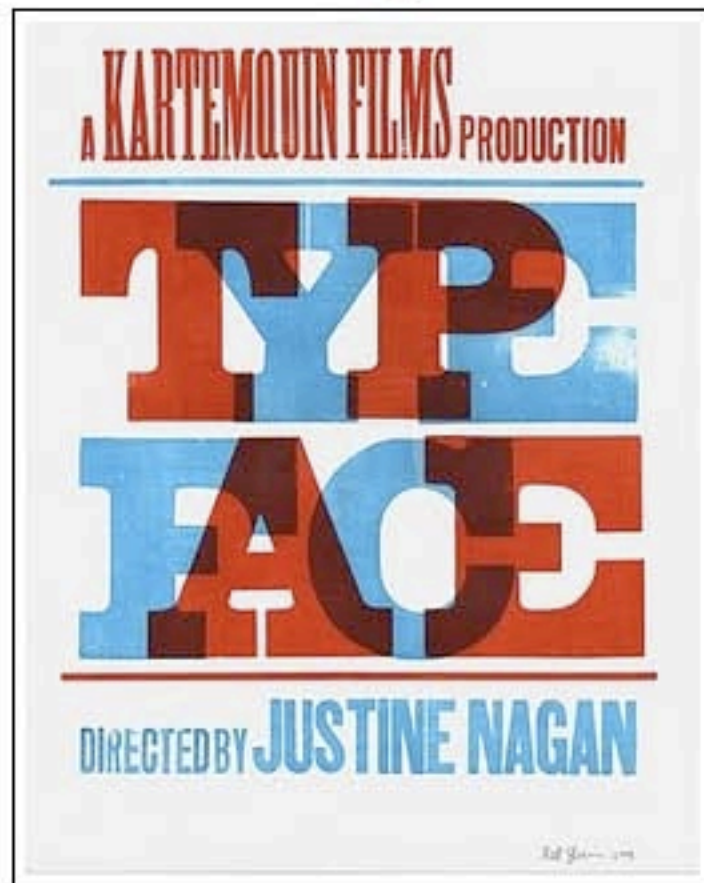

I found this handy manual on AIGA's website. Written by RitaSue Siegel, a design consultant and president of RitaSueSiegelResources, the handbook offers advice to new and upcoming designers looking to break into the design industry. I haven't been able to take a look at the entire handbook, but there are many interesting parts. There is a self-evaluation test, detailed descriptions of different designer roles, how to handle the job hunting process, how to create a good resume and portfolio, and how to nail the interview. This comes at a perfect time for me since I will be graduating in May!
